The only difference in the book are that the data case at the end of each chapter is somewhat different from the American version; but you can find the updated data cases, which appear on the American version, on the publisher's official site if your professor requires you to do one or some of them. One more thing is that it takes a long long time to be shipped to you if you are buying from foreign sellers. So if you plan to get one of this from foreign sellers, anticipate at least two weeks before you actually can get the book. 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Love the way this book is set up and written By Sandra R. Beitler Love the way this book is set up and written. I like that it uses very recent examples for the case studies and really facilitates my learning. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Apex Media is a ripoff schister company sending out books that should be incinerated for high prices. By E-DubOK, this book sucked and so did the course, but that is somewhat irrelevant, as I had to take it for my degree. I am more disappointed with Apex Media. They sent a book that looked like it was chewed on by a dog--literally. I was beyond disappointed.

Business and Society: Stakeholders Ethics Public Policy 15e by Lawrence and Weber has continued through several successive author teams to be the market-leader in its field. This new edition highlights why government regulation is sometimes required as well as new models of business-community collaboration. The authors believe that businesses have social (as well as economic) responsibilities to society; that business and government both have important roles to play in the modern economy; and that ethics and integrity are essential to personal fulfillment and to business success. In addition this textbook has long been popular with students because of its lively writing up-to-date examples and clear explanations of theory.

About the Author James Weber is a professor of management and business ethics at Duquesne University. He also serves as the executive director of the Institute for Ethics in Business, and coordinates the Masters of Science in Leadership and Business Ethics program at Duquesne. He holds a Ph.D. from the University of Pittsburgh and has taught at the University of San Francisco, University of Pittsburgh, and Marquette University. His areas of interest and research include managerial and organizational values, cognitive moral reasoning, business ethics, ethics training and education, eastern religions' ethics, and corporate social audit and performance.
